5 Keys to Basic Pool Care

The 5 essentials of pool maintenance described here will give you a basic understanding of how your pool functions. For a carefree swimming season, learn about the 5 keys and visit Pool Works any time you need assistance or expert advice. Pool care can be simple when you have a plan for routine maintenance and use the right products.

KEEP IN MIND...

Each of the 5 keys below is very important. Consider each key as a simple, preventive maintenance step.

1 Circulation. Pool water must be circulated for maximum sanitizer effectiveness. The more your water is in motion, the harder it is for bacteria and algae to grow. The best time to circulate the water is during the day, for 10 hours or more.

2 Filtration. The filter is one of your most important pieces of equipment. It removes both visible debris and most microscopic matter. Generally, a filter should be backwashed (the removal of debris trapped on or in the filter media) when the water pressure in the filter reaches 8 to 10 psi above normal. (Check manufacturer's guidelines.) Because backwashing does not remove all oils and deeply embedded debris, every filter needs to be chemically cleaned regularly using Strip Kwik or another cleaner.

3 Cleaning. Most swimming pools have areas with little to no circulation. This is where algae and bacteria can start to grow. At least once a week, the walls and floor should be brushed and vacuumed to remove debris that the filter misses.

4 Testing. Every pool has characteristics that must be regularly measured and adjusted. Most important are the pH and the level of active sanitizer. By testing these two factors at regular intervals, you'll understand how bather load, weather and product application affects your water. Test your pool water two or three times per week. Also, take a sample to Pool Works when you open and close your pool, and every four to six weeks during the season. This will help you maintain proper water balance and greatly reduce the potential for algae growth and other problems.

5 Chemistry. The last step in a total pool maintenance program is applying the right products to your pool water at the right time. This will help you:

- Provide a sanitary swimming environment
- Balance the water to protect the equipment and pool surfaces. Unbalanced water can permanently damage both
- Provide brilliant, sparkling water that's inviting.
