Do You Have Trouble Getting Around?

Thousands of Americans, like you, do because of illness, injury or the aging process.

For them, maintaining some level of independence in their own homes is nearly impossible because they are not able to complete daily activities and live active lifestyles.

If this sounds like you, call us today and speak to one of our mobility specialists.

Mobility Check.

If you can answer “yes” to all of the following questions, you may be eligible for funding assistance to help pay for a power chair through Medicare, Medicaid or your private insurance.

- Do I need a wheelchair or scooter to complete my daily activities in my home and to maintain some level of independence?
- Does my condition limit my ability to safely propel a manual wheelchair or to operate a scooter?
- Without the use of a wheelchair would I otherwise be confined to a bed or chair?
- Do I have the capability to safely operate a power wheelchair?

If you answered “yes” to the questions above, talk to your doctor.

Ask Your Doctor.

Your physician is familiar with the diagnoses that may entitle you to funding assistance through Medicare, Medicaid or other insurance. Only he or she can make the medical assessment required to ensure eligibility.
